The product of her collaboration with Steph Hung did not disappoint. I absolutely loved everything about this book! Make Give is full of fun ideas for creating the most meaningful gifts for the people you love. The authors' brilliant use of everyday materials to make these gifts is also inspiring. I don't think of myself as a crafty person, but on occasion I'll make something if it doesn't seem too intimidating to do so. Thankfully, for people like myself, Make Give provides a large number of approachable projects. The thoughtful design and layout of the book also make for great eye candy. Each project begins with a personal tidbit on what inspired the craft, followed by photo visuals of all required materials, and clear step-by-step instructions. Included are templates that are easy to scan and use. My favorite gifting projects include: Progressive Date, Flower Pun Bouquets, Personal Storybook, Farmers Market Gifts, Perpetual Greeting, and Essential Housewarming Gift Guide. There really is something in here for everyone. My somewhat crafty sister was over the other day, and she voraciously devoured all the pages of this book. I know what I'm getting her for Christmas! 1 of 1

Like another reviewer stated, a lot of the crafts are geared towards children. I bought this book because I love Erin Jang's design aesthetic and wanted to support her work. I'm just a bit underwhelmed in terms of ideas for gifting adults. For example: the candy necklaces from the book that many blogs have featured are something I would never gift an adult. But with that said, the crafts that I think are appropriate for gifting to adults are sweet and have given me some ideas for creating my own. It also has a great list of materials sources and a good list of craft supplies you should always have on hand if you want to be ready to make give!

By koi love arts crafts, but i've never been too skilled at making them myself. this book is the much needed guide and inspiration for the admirers to now become the crafters! the ideas really do cover an impressive spectrum of occasions and people in your life, way more than i had expected (i.e. gifts for baby-sitters, co-workers, etc.)the graphics are superb and the quality of the actual physical book is stunning. a great coffee table book, or a bright pop of color for your bookshelf.

A design-savvy craft book with 35 cute, simple projects that celebrate the people we love in the everyday moments. This is a book of 35 simple, modern craft projects to make any day special for the people we love. A handmade gift--even the smallest and simplest of gestures--brings a smile and makes a moment more meaningful. Any day, not just holidays and specific occasions, is an opportunity to create and gift. These versatile projects require no special skills and work for a range of people--from children to house guests--and occasions. Visually driven in its presentation, Make and Give stands apart from the traditional craft book with its bright colors and modern, graphic look. Each project is illustrated with step-by-step photographs, charts, and unique infographics. Less text, more photos, and illustrated designs guide the reader. The projects are inspired by the things the authors--designers and crafters by trade--make for their own friends and family. The book includes the authors' personal inspiration for each project, as well as "Make This For" tips to encourage readers to think about the special people for whom they could make these crafts. Projects include fill-in-the-blank tattoos, pressed herb prints, a weekday advent, a family tree embroidery, hand-drawn pillows, and candy capsule necklaces.

Make Give is fun, approachable, and upbeat. Its chock-full of clever (and affordable!) projects that prove just how exciting and easy do-it-yourself gifts can be.
Grace Bonney, author of *Design*Sponge at Home* Im thrilled to have this book as a part of my library. The projects are sweet and thoughtful. They remind you that making something for someone else really is the best feeling ever.
Joy Cho, Founder and Creative Director of Oh Joy!
Make Give not only offers a drool-worthy collection of amazing crafts, but its also beautifully designed and organized, which makes it a great gift itself. A+ to the crafty duo!
Sarah Goldschadt, author of Craft-a-Day and Pom-Poms!
The ideas in Make Give are both original and brilliant but are completely doable, making this the best craft book Ive seen in years. It is a must-have for any crafters library.
Jordan Ferney, creator of Oh Happy Day
I heart Erin + Steph and I heart their kind of smart, whimsical craft: the kind thats loaded up with love and that anyone can make. Their projects are fantastically simple and simply genius. Make Give is full of why-didnt-I-think-of-that! ideas with a unique sense of humor and graphic gotchas.
Vanessa Holden, Creative Director at West Elm
Make Give is full of bright and playful projects that are so easy to make and even more fun to do. For years to come, youll return to these colorful, creative ideas for gifts, parties, and craft activities.
